Nature and Extent of Involvement of Faculty and Students in Academic Affairs / Improvements

The Heritage Academy (THA) promotes the vital involvement of both faculty and students in their respective roles as Educator and Learner. Each faculty member is encouraged to assess students' intellectual capabilities in the classroom and to subsequently tailor their teaching approaches, ensuring that every student benefits from the educational experience.

The Institute encourages faculty members to develop innovative teaching and learning strategies drawn from their expertise, applicable not only to theoretical courses but also to practical and sessional activities involving projects, ideas, and design. Throughout this ongoing process, students are actively engaged through direct participation or by providing feedback on the developed methodologies. This collaborative effort between educators and learners has significantly enhanced the current teaching and learning framework at THA.

As an integral component of the curriculum and beyond, each faculty member at THA is paired with a group of students to oversee research work, which has, on occasion, opened new avenues in research and development. Notably, several of these pioneering initiatives have garnered substantial recognition from both academic circles and industry professionals.

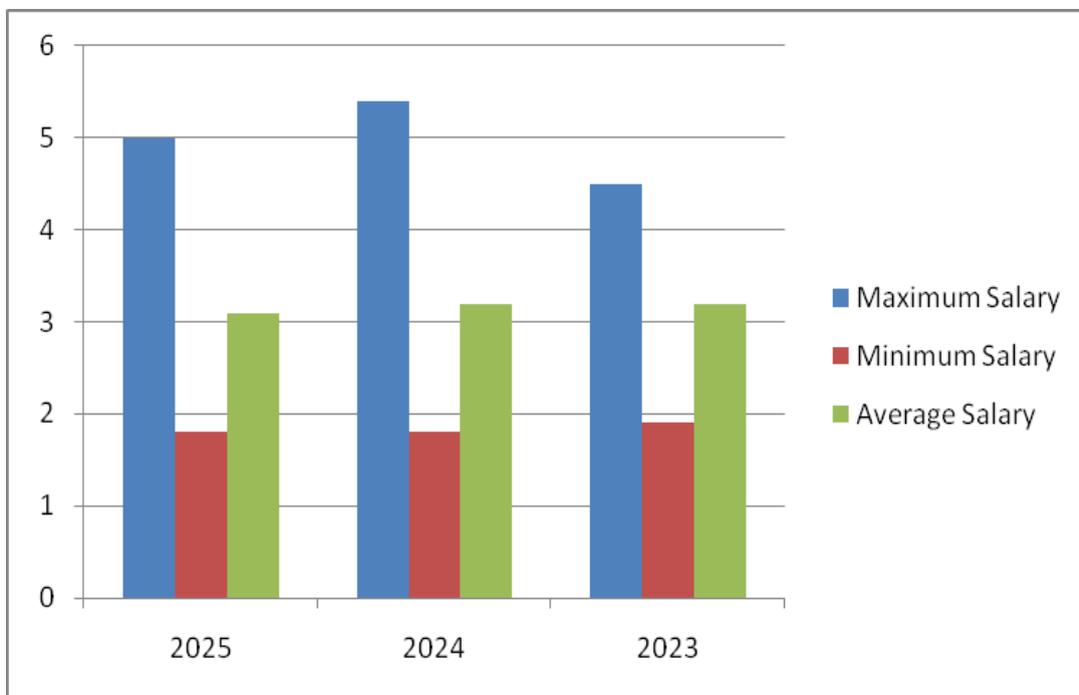

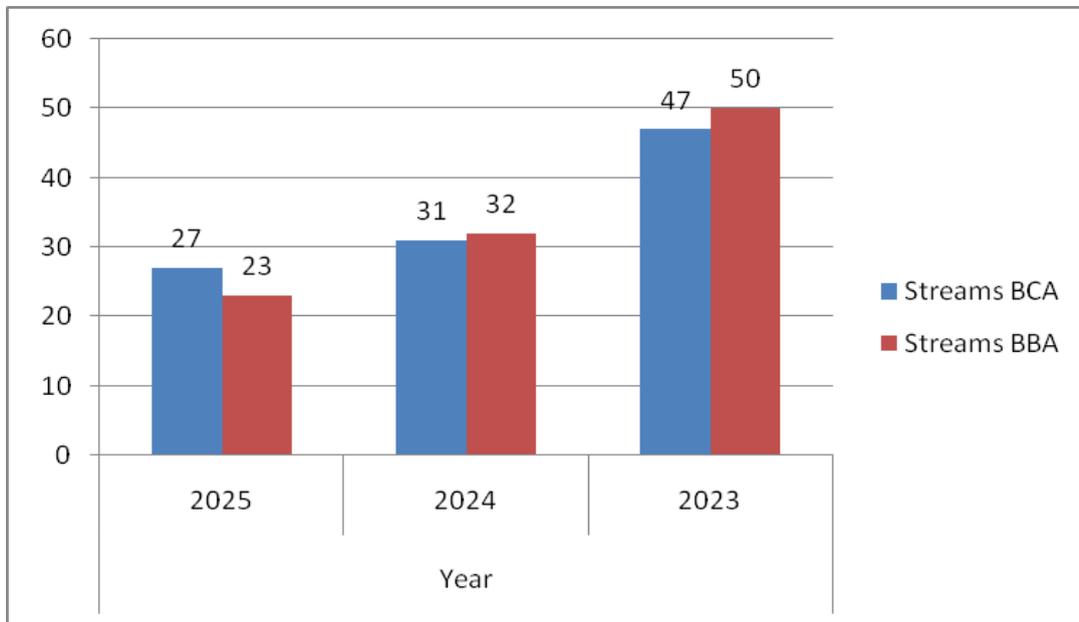

In addition to classroom engagement at THA, equal importance is given to cultivating educator-student mentorship, actively promoting a partnership that transforms education both as a practice and as a system. From the very first day students arrive at the Institute, each student is assigned a Mentor for the duration of their studies. Students are encouraged to approach their Mentor even outside regular office hours for assistance and guidance. Faculty members are also actively engaged as Faculty Coordinators in various clubs dedicated to students' extracurricular pursuits. Thus, educators' role in fostering meaningful student involvement positions them as facilitators, with students as collaborative partners.
